A black and white illustration of a tiger pouncing on a rabbit in a field. In the background, a man in a hat and a woman are watching. The rabbit has the word 'SINGUESAN' written on its back. The tiger is in the foreground, leaping towards the rabbit. The rabbit is running away from the tiger. The man and woman are in the background, looking on. The scene is set in a field with some rocks in the foreground. The style is a simple line drawing.

There were besides radishes, soups, greens, canned salmon, oranges, lemons, sweet potatoes, salt and smoked fish and other things sufficient to provide for an army.

The poor of the great metropolis are greater in number than an army, but no one was sent away empty-handed. The clergymen of the city have performed their duty admirably, and hundreds who presented notes from the priest, minister or rabbi, to whose flock they belonged, were helped at "The Evening World" Free Food Commission.

Several clergymen, in acceptance of the invitation oft repeated by "The Evening World," visited the scene to-day. Among these was Rev. H. Mitchell, of the
